Denunciation of Klan Starts Demonstration That Ends in Rioting

Break Comes During Speech Making Oscar W. Underwood in Nominations.

POLITICIANS ARE CALLED IN

Albino Delegates Start Parade and Trouble Is Precipitated When Others Prevent Missions Standard Bearer Following Southerners.

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, New York, June 25.—Klan in all mingled in strange convulsions in the Democratic national convention today.

Swearing in began the race of a hot June sun which poured down upon the garden delegates as they listened to the speech of Permanent Chairman Thomas J. Walsh in which he attacked the Republican administration, and then came nominating speeches with Alabama first presenting Senator Underwood.

Pandemonium broke out at the first direct mention of the Ku Klux Klan. Fordney Johnson of Alabama, placing Senator Underwood's name before the convention, denounced the "hooded and secret organization known as the Ku Klux Klan."

With a crushing cheer delegates arose in their chairs, shouted, threw their hats in the air and finally started a parade. Fight broke out in the Missouri and Colorado delegations, requiring policemen to intervene.

The standard holder in the Missouri delegation started off to follow Alabama in the parade of delegations but was halted back by a fellow delegate with the aid of two women. The Colorado row ended in a fist-fight. Bitter feelings developed in several members fought for and against adding the Colorado banner to the parade. The standard was wrecked in the melee. The worst of the outbreak ended when the band struck up "America."

Senator Joseph T. Robinson of Kansas, "a great American, a proven leader who can heal all party wounds, a 25th century crusader for the immortal principles of democracy," was next placed in nomination by Governor H. Pugh.

William G. McAdoo was visualized as a new Jackson, came to lead the Nation back to "a business-like government for the common people" in the speech of former Senator James D. Phelan of California, placing him in nomination.

Setting forth the McAdoo claims to the office Phelan quoted the words of Woodrow Wilson when McAdoo resigned the secretaryship of the treasury after the war: "This man is the most successful man in the country."

A prolonged demonstration followed the nomination of McAdoo. Hundreds of delegates leaped to their feet and began a parade of the hall.

Throughout the morning the resolutions committee heard arguments for various planks to be put in the platform. The Klan battle led all the way. It appeared the fight on this issue will certainly go to the floor of the convention unless the committee returns a strong anti-Klan plank. George Brennan of Illinois claims 700 votes in the convention for an anti-Klan plank and unless the platform condemns the Klan he would have every man and woman in the convention called to stand up and state his position with respect to the hooded order.

The demonstration was still in progress at 4:10 o'clock.

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, New York, June 25.—Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana, leader in the senatorial investigation of the oil scandal growing out of oil leases granted by former Secretary of the Interior Albert B. Fall, today assumed the permanent chairmanship of the Democratic convention and laid down these issues as the ones upon which the party could concentrate in the coming campaign:

- (1)—Honest government.
- (2)—Repeal of the new tariff law.
- (3)—Relief for agriculture.
- (4)—Related reforms.

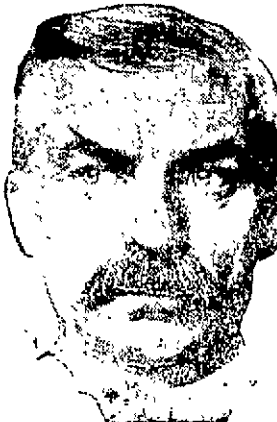

In setting forth these issues in a speech to the convention, featured by a vigorous attack on alleged maladministration under the Harding Coolidge presidency, Walsh issued a significant warning to the party against being bogged into a position where the campaign would be settled on the question of whether or not the United States should enter the League of Nations.

"I know how eager," he said, "the managers of the campaign for the reelection of President Coolidge are to switch the issue from honest government, the repeal of the new tariff of abominations relief for agriculture, and related reforms, to the League of Nations."

"It is not so necessary that we waver," he said, "on the issue as it is that we abandon feeble antagonism to any world no enemy, however commendable."

Accompanying the medal was a letter from Isaac M. Scott, president of the steel corporation, which follows: "The excellent bar pin is presented to you as an expression of our appreciation of the invaluable service you rendered during period following the Benwood mine explosion, April 28, 1924."

"Permit me to extend my personal gratitude for the way you responded to the call of humanity and I trust that this token will remind others of the unselfish service you rendered in behalf of your fellowmen."

WALSH'S GAVEL PUTS DELEGATE ON THE HEAD

NEW YORK, June 25.—When Senator Thomas J. Walsh was sworn in as permanent chairman of the Democratic National Convention at Madison square garden today, he put the delegates on their heads in a wild commotion.

At a point in his speech for the usual toasts to the delegates, he blew the whistle and the delegates, who had been standing at attention, began to cheer and shout.

"KEYNOTE" AN OLD-FASHIONED STUMP SPEECH

Unsurpassed in Recent Years in Bitterness of Inveective or Satire.

AN APPEAL TO PARTISANS

By DAVID LAWRENCE Copyright, 1924, by The Courier. MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, New York, June 25.—No political speech in recent years compares with that of "Keynote" Pat Harrison chief harangue of the Democratic party, either in bitterness of invective or penetrating satire. No speech has even been fashioned like it unless it be the denunciation of the Wilson administration made by Senator Henry Cabot Lodge at Chicago in 1920 or a few weeks later at Marion, Ohio.

What Representative Harrison's keynote speech at Cleveland lacked in partisan fire was supplied in great abundance in Senator Harrison's responsive reply to the Republican platform of 1924. The keynote speech, however, was exactly what the Democrats wanted. For several days copies of it were in circulation and every quarter hour came expressions of deep satisfaction with the document as almost a platform in itself.

If there has been doubt that the Democratic party would go to the country and point the finger of scorn at Albert B. Fall, still true on his ranch, that doubt has been removed. If there has been any doubt that the Democrats would point accusingly to the quick work of the Department of Justice in indicting Senator Wheeler of Montana while no effort was made to indict Albert B. Fall, that doubt too has been removed.

Corruption in the government under the Republican regime and a daring challenge to anyone to point to a single case of corruption by any high official or member of Congress of Democratic affiliation may be said to be the basis of Senator Harrison's whole appeal. Whatever Mr. McAdoo did in his relations of lawyer to client happened after he left public office. The Mississippi senator took credit for the Democratic party for the exposure of Albert B. Fall's record of the secretary of the navy and the attorney general. He asked the Republican party to look up what its 51 investigating committees found in connection with the Democratic administration during the war.

Apart from the Temptation scandal, which is not to be allowed to slumber, Senator Harrison revealed the plan of the party leaders to make political capital out of the Mellon tax plan. They welcome the plea of President Coolidge for the Mellon plan and utilize again the argument that more taxpayers are benefitted under the Democratic plan followed by Senator Simmons of North Carolina and Representative Garner of Texas than would have been the case had the Mellon plan been adopted.

Mostly it was an old-fashioned political speech with all sorts of daggers thrown to the hope of dividing the Republican party. Caustic references to the fact that Senator Borah refused to join Coolidge as a running mate, and to the effort at Cleveland to pin the blame of the oil scandal on the Republican party, were not omitted by Senator Harrison who showed himself a master of caustic satire.

Candidates have been for the moment forgotten. Sensitive to the inner currents of the convention and the menace of possible friction between the factions of the party, Senator Harrison made a plea for party harmony. His outburst of Woodrow Wilson was in itself an appeal for a reunion of all elements in the party in a common cause.

"It would seem now," he concluded, "we can hear the soft voice of sweet reasonableness coming to us from Montpelier, the voice of our friend Woodrow Wilson, whispering to us: 'You from halting hands we throw the torch. Hold it high. Hold it high. Carry on, carry on; keep the faith; keep the faith.'"

Taggart Maneuvering Senatorial Position as a Compromise Candidate.

FIGHT ON LEAGUE ISSUE

McAdoo Waiting Until Platform Is Adopted So He Can Declare His Stand; Leaders Desire Man Who Won't Be on Defensive from Start.

Special Dispatch by David Lawrence. Copyright, 1924, by The Courier. MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, New York, June 25.—William Gibbs McAdoo is holding his lines. Governor Al Smith of New York is forming a more cohesive organization hourly and working in combination with several "favorite son" delegations.

John W. Davis, leader of the dark horses and second choice of most of the delegates of the convention, has been almost irreparably hurt by the disclosure that he is an attorney for the Standard Oil Company. Senator Ralston of Indiana, although criticized as being too old to make the strenuous race ahead, is considered the least objectionable of the candidates offered and Tom Taggart is maneuvering his way gradually into position for a compromise.

Until the McAdoo delegates have been definitely driven away from the former secretary of the treasury, the convention will remain deadlocked indefinitely and talk of dark horses is premature, and the McAdoo delegates are sticking.

This is the situation on the second day of the Democratic National Convention so far as candidates are concerned but there are other troubles and controversies almost as significant and vexing for the delegates. It is incredibly for instance, that there should be a row in a Democratic convention over the League of Nations issue, especially after the remarkable demonstration which greeted the mention of William Wilson's name in the opening session but it is true nevertheless. The resolutions committee is still holding open hearings before going into executive session but the friends of the League are growing more and more apprehensive every minute that the committee may decide to straddle the question and adopt something vague and indefinite instead of a straight declaration for American participation in the League of Nations.

There is every likelihood that unless the platform plank is unequivocal on this subject, the fight will be carried to the floor of the convention. The origin of the trouble here, however, is interesting. There are many states where the Democrats who left the party in 1920 on the League issue have not returned. In their anxiety to win, own staunch adherents of the League are saying there is no use deliberately antagonizing large groups of voters. In opposition to this line of reasoning is the oft repeated argument of the pro-League sentiment that has swung considerably since 1920 and that even the Republican Convention at Cleveland was not as hostile to cooperation with Europe as was the case in 1920.

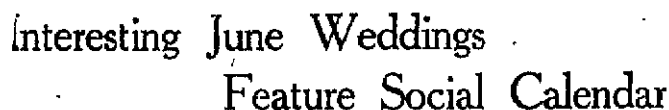

The McAdoo managers who, it would be thought, would lead the fight for the League of Nations, are conspicuously silent, preferring to have the issue made by others. Men like Newton D. Baker and Carter Glass will not let it slumber and are sure to insist on a plank favorable to the League. McAdoo's position is that the League should be entered by the United States only after a national referendum. William Jennings Bryan favors the same thing.

On the Ku Klux Klan plank agreement seems to be in sight and there is much less controversy about the prohibition question than there was four years ago. The platform will be brought in by the resolutions committee on Thursday, but a debate on the floor appears inevitable with the final decision subject to balloting on specific planks by the convention itself.

Most of the opposition to McAdoo here has developed from the Ku Klux Klan issue and his supporters are anxious to have the platform adopted so that he can publicly say he stands on the plank there. This may dispose of much of the antagonism he has encountered, though when that is out of the way a revival of the oil issue would not be surprising.

The arguments of the McAdoo people on this phase of their campaign here are interesting. The keynote speech of Senator Pat Harrison pointed with pride to the record of the Democratic administration in having a no scandal record in eight years of power. "So also," do the friends of McAdoo contend "in five years and a half serving as secretary of the treasury and later as director general of railroads, handling twenty-seven billions of dollars, not a single act can be pointed out as dishonest or improper in his official record. It is the principal answer made now by the McAdoo people."

Simple Way to Store Your Furs for Summer

If you have no cedar chest for your furs, you can improvise one very nicely. Take any tight wooden container with a closely fitting cover, such as an old-fashioned trunk or lined box. Soak the outside thoroughly, and let dry in the open air. Now take some clean newspapers and a generous quantity of freshly made, cooked, paste which contains borax or alum. A teaspoonful of either one to a pint of paste will be sufficient.

Line the box with the paper, fitting neatly at the corners, and leaving no gaps to curl up. Leave open to dry. Get some cedar chips or shavings and put into a loose cheese cloth bag; or if you cannot get those, get some store-keeper to save for you his empty cedar cigar boxes. Break these up. Take out the nails and put in the bottom of your cedar chest.

Purchase an ounce of cedar oil at the drug store. Take a wide-mouthed bottle such as olive or pickles come in when bought from the grocery store. Fill the clean bottle with absorbent cotton. Pour in sufficient of the cedar oil to moisten the cotton lightly. Then cork with a clean, fresh piece of cotton, and stand in one corner of the paper-lined box.

Lay your furs in carefully, being sure that each piece is clean and free from moths or dust, for if there are moths, eggs present they will hatch out. Cover the furs and woollens with clean newspapers. Sprinkle a few drops of turpentine over the whole and close the cover tightly.

If you have only one or two pieces of fur to pack away, and have no provision for taking care of these, get a clean purchased suit box. You can get one of these in a good, heavy quality at a store or a tailoring establishment. Clean your furs. Lay into the box sprinkle with powdered tobacco. Put the cover on the box and paste a strip of paper tightly over the opening. This will prevent any wandering insect crawling up under and feeding on your valuables.

When you want to use the articles in the fall all you have to do is to break the seal, shake out the furs and hang them in the open air for half a day. Exchange.

City Is Musical Center

The Moravians have given Bethlehem, Pa., a national reputation as a musical center. Led by Count Nikolaus Zinzendorf, they founded the city shortly before Christmas in 1741—the season of the year suggested the name. Benjamin Franklin was strongly impressed with the fine music in their church, and toward the close of the nineteenth century a choir, under the direction of the organist, J. Frederick Wolfe, became widely known, rendering for the first time in America Bach's "St. John Passion" (in 1838), followed by "St. Matthew Passion," the "Christmas Oratorios," the "Mass in B Minor" and finally by an annual Bach festival continuing three days.

Striking Black Hats

Lovely black hats are a striking feature at the moment. They are rather large, made of tulle and lace, usually decorated with a few big vivid flowers.

Denunciation of Klan Starts Demonstration That Ends in Rioting

able in itself, merely because it is in some way associated with the league." Attacking the Administration's record from its beginning, Walsh said that "back to normalcy" meant back to the day "when Hanna ruled and Aldridge legislated, when the Senate was a millionaire's club, doing the bidding of the 'invisible government.'" Furthermore, the slogan "every nation for itself" very easily leads to "the rule of the strong in every man for himself," he said.

Because the same element within it that "controlled and wrecked" the Republican party in 1912, retained its supremacy in 1920, he said, it was not so strange that the new president was speedily surrounded by a group of mercenaries, whose sinister purposes he was from his kindly nature loathe to suspect and for one reason or another, unable to discern.

"What a galaxy," he exclaimed. "Forbes, Fall, Daugherty, Jess Smith, Manning, Frazier, Burton, Kramer, with Kiehl Stinson and Gaston II. Means in the back ground." He chided the Republican party for not "accepting" the anti-lynch public servants" and added "it is in this way tolerance of turpitude in public office that the real peril to free government lies, rather than in its usual occurrence."

He recalled that President Coolidge had investigated against the Senate investigations on several occasions and related this bit of history:

"When the British house of commons sought to investigate the profligate and corrupt Duke of Buckingham, in connection with the ill-fated descent upon Cadiz, Charles wrote that body: 'I see you especially aim at the Duke of Buckingham. I must let you know I will not allow any of my servants to be questioned among you, much less such as are of eminent place and dear me.'"

"Charles lost his head and Calvin Coolidge may profit politically by his example."

CONVENTION WILL BE DEAD-LOCKED SO LONG AS McADOO'S DELEGATES STICK TO HIM

Adoo men and it will be their line of defense if he is nominated. But it has a weakness. Many of the delegates are being urged to nominate some one who will not have to be on the defensive from the start. And that is where the dark horses hold their heads high with hope.

700 Delegates Pledged To Plank Denouncing Klan, Arch Enemy, Brennan, Says

Fight Will Be Taken to Floor If Resolutions Committee Falls.

SEN. WALSH TAKES HAND

Opponents of Proposal to Name the Hooded Organization and Condemn Its Activities in Democratic Convention Held to Be Fast Denouncing.

By United Press.

NEW YORK, June 25.—After a careful canvass of the sentiment in the Democratic convention on the Klan issue, George E. Brennan, Democratic boss of Illinois and leader of the anti-Klan movement, claimed today that more than 700 delegates are now pledged to vote for a plank denouncing the hooded organization by name.

Brennan is more determined than ever to carry the fight for a Klan plank to the floor if there is any "misconduct" attempt at sidetracking the question in the committee on resolutions which now is drafting the platform.

Senator David Walsh of Massachusetts leaped into the fight today. He said those who have been opposing the plank or favoring compromise are now losing their positions "like rats deserting a sinking ship."

Their Opponents.

The Lutherans opened the Christians into bottom position in the Shoreshore league by "cleaning up" 18 to nine games last evening on the South Side grounds. Only one Lutheran team lost, Hoover and Christner being blanked. In all others the victors had the edge on their opponents.

Eric Peterson and Rev. W. H. Hetrick of the Lutherans were the pitching marvels of the evening. They completely outdistanced Abe Dumbauld, Percy and Ringler. The last substituted for Dumbauld in the last two games.

A movement is under way to have the Dickerson Run branch of the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie Railroad represented in the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie Railroad Baseball League. Fourteen teams are already entered and four more are wanted. This movement is backed by the foremen at the Dickerson Run shops, who backed basketball. This would be an interesting thing for the railroad men, as the Divida Independent would, in all probability, suffer by this. The majority of the Divida players are employed by the railroad company, who would profit more by joining the railroad team. It would mean either this team or that, and it is up to the public to decide which one is to represent them.

A meeting will be called during this week at the Y. M. C. A. where the officials expect to decide upon a baseball membership drive which will be conducted by the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie Athletic Association for the Dickerson Run branch to help finance the team.

The Divada Independents are scheduled to appear at Oliver No. 8 tomorrow evening in a return engagement. The Youth Valley team is thirsting for revenge, being defeated by the Oliver team, 10 to 2, in their first game at the Dickerson Run grounds. The two corporations are renowned throughout the country for the quality of the loading waters in this county and they proved their ability in the first battle, wounding out 14 hits. The Divada team went through several extra-period practice sessions, polishing all dull spots in its batting and fielding. A remarkable improvement was seen last evening in the practice session of the tri-township team.

The following players are requested to meet at the Vanderbilt Hotel at 4 o'clock: Manager Abate, Captain Durbin, McLaughlin, John and Steve Sohongoan, Brown, Black, Whipkey, Ambrose, Nowell, McKnight, Sprout, Adlds and Horwatt.

This evening Trotter will be the attraction at the Dickerson Run Y. M. C. A. grounds. The game will be called at 4:30 o'clock and Adlds and Trotter will be the work of the Divada team. Alexander and Frazier, probably, will work for the Trotter team.

Trotter defeated Bliner last evening at Trotter, 10 to 4. The Trotter team hit Clippi freely, while Calvey kept the Bliner swatters in check. The Trotter team scored in the first inning, three times in the second, once in the fifth and seventh and added three runs in the eighth. Bliner scored one in the sixth and three in the seventh.

The Trotter team will play the Drava Independents this evening at the Dickerson Run W. M. C. A. grounds.

The Paramount

"EAST SIDE, WEST SIDE," on view today and tomorrow at the Paramount, presents Kenneth Harlan and Eileen Percy in the leading roles. That any picture which deals with the rich contrasts and the dramatic conflict of New York City life is certain to carry a strong human interest will be appreciated by picture patrons everywhere. Any story which features the sharp contrast of the East Side and the West Side, the difference in the social spheres of products of these two sections, is certain to unfold a highly interesting plot, which tugs at the emotions and enlists a host of sympathy for its central figures.

The human appeal comes from the struggles of a young girl to keep her head up—to keep smiling in the face of adversity. She has much to contend with—has Lory James. Yet she keeps faith with herself—with her ideals. She will not give up her world life to become a daughter of luxury—not until she knows that the man who is willing to take her up in the world is as clean and honorable as herself. Such a girl is Lory James. No wonder she arouses deep sympathy.

The program also includes "Peter Stuyvesant" in three reels, the sixth of the Chronicles of America. Friday and Saturday Leo Maloney will be seen in "Ridin' Double."

The Soisson

"IN THE PALACE OF THE KING," showing today at the Soisson, is a vivid and dramatic picture spectacular presented by an all star cast, Blanche Sweet appearing in the leading role. The story is set in the court of the Spanish King, Philip II, and carries his readers into the center of a sinister court intrigue, depicts King Philip as a grasping, ruthless, jealous monarch, shows the stern love and sacrifice of a soldier for his daughter and, above all, the love of the gentle Dolores for Don John, brother of the king, soldier, prince and idol of Spain.

Her father, thinking to shield her from the man he regards as a heartless adventurer, refuses to permit the beautiful Dolores to attend the court celebration in honor of Don John, returning to Madrid after a successful campaign, but, aided by her blind sister, Inez, Dolores escapes from the room. She meets Don John on a balcony by accident, and they decide to wed immediately. He takes her to his apartments in a palace until the celebration in his honor is over.

Playing opposite Miss Sweet is Edmund Lowe as Don John. He is one of the handsomest leading men on the screen and is an actor of understanding and ability. The role of King Philip II is portrayed by Sam de Grasse, another able character actor. Hobart Bosworth is the faithful General Mendoza and his characterization is notable for its life-likeness and for the minuteness of detail in costuming, in make-up and in acting.

Thursday, Friday and Saturday Richard Dix will be featured in the "The Sin Flood."

The Orpheum

"ICEBOUND"—America's prize play, is the feature picture today and tomorrow at the Orpheum. Of hundreds of plays, it ranked first. "Icebound" will hold you spellbound. There's tremendous story power in this romance of storm-swept, sun-shine-seeking souls. Lois Wilson and Richard Dix appear in the leading roles.

Mr. Dix has the role of Ben Jordan who, while drinking with some neighbor's boys in their barn, sets fire to the place and runs away to escape arrest, returning the night his old mother dies.

Mrs. Jordan leaves the entire family fortune to Jane Grosby (Lois Wilson), her ward. Jane offers to put up the money to keep Ben out of jail if he will but settle down and work out the farm for her. He does this, and the two gradually fall in love until Ben's flapper cousin, Nettie (Vera Reynolds) almost spoils things by stealing a pretty new dress Jane has made to please Ben. Ben falls for the girl's hangings just as Jane comes in. "Why say now?" You'll like "Icebound"; everyone does.

Besides Miss Reynolds, those who appear in support of the principal players are Helen Dubois, Edna May Oliver, who has the same role she did in the stage production; Mary Foy, Little Joseph Depew, Ethel Wales, Alice Chapin, John Daly Murphy and Frank Shannon.

Friday and Saturday, "Not a Drum Was Heard," starring Charles Stone, will be shown.

A Score of Features to Explain These Results

The Phaeton

Among Chrysler Six features which contribute to its long life and operating economy, is the combination air cleaner which purges the air taken in by the carburetor. This cleaner effectively protects the cylinders and piston from the entrance of fine, gritty dust. Of equal importance is the Chrysler oil filter, which thoroughly cleans all the oil in the crankcase every 25 miles, and contributes much to smoothness, freedom from carbon, and longer life of seating and moving parts.

The Touring $1395 The Phaeton $2495
The Sedan $1625 The Station $1725
The Brookton $1895 The Roadster $1995
All prices in N. Y. include tax.

Every one who has familiarized himself with the new Chrysler Six and its extraordinary performance is convinced that this car is the leaf of the automobile calendar many years forward.

The engine design embodies a new type of combustion chamber that burns all the gas. Also a new way of distributing the gas equally to all cylinders. A score of other features must be taken into account to explain why an engine only 3-inch bore by 4 1/4-inch stroke delivers 68 horsepower, top speed well over 70 miles an hour, and a pick-up that is electrifying.

All these things you'll understand better when you ride in the car. You'll find, also, an amazing amount of room, and an ease of handling and parking that is a constant delight.

We are pleased to extend the convenience of time payments, and about Chrysler's financing plan.

RESTORE TRAFFIC ON MISSISSIPPI

Army Engineers Build Dams to Make River Navigable to St. Paul.

St. Paul, Minn.—From the windows of the train as it winds its way along the Mississippi between Chicago and the Twin Cities one may note innumerable odd-looking structures of brush and stone jutting out into the river. Some are but a few yards long, others a hundred yards or more. From a distance they look not unlike boat docks. At points where the train makes a curve, affording a sweeping view up or down the river, the passenger may see a score or more of these projections within the space of a mile or two.

In reply to the curious passenger the trainman explains that they are "government dams," and the passenger, settling back in his seat, accepts the explanation, but wonders why in the world Uncle Sam is building such a string of queer-looking dams. For at no point do they entirely span the river and they do not have the massive appearance of the ordinary river dam. All along the Mississippi, from St. Paul down to St. Louis, these wing or spur dams, as they are officially known among government engineers, may be seen. Three thousand have been constructed between Minneapolis and Prairie du Chien, Wis., and about 1,000 more are to be made. Their purpose is to narrow the channel of the Father of Waters so as to maintain a depth of six feet throughout the length of the upper Mississippi at low-water stage. In other words, these dams form a straight jacket by which it is hoped to put the great waterway in navigable shape for freight-carrying boats, which have been virtually unknown on the upper river for ten years or more.

Making the River Navigable.
For half a century and more government engineers have been "disciplining" the Mississippi. In the days before the Civil war, Robert E. Lee was assigned by the War department to do engineering work on the river. The real improvement work, however, began back in 1878, when the government sought to establish and maintain a minimum channel depth of 4½ feet. In those years, in ordinary seasons, a freighter could come all the way up the river to the Twin Cities. But in some years the stage of water receded down to less than three feet, making it impossible for the larger boats to get above Winona, Minn., thus interfering greatly with regular river traffic. It was to correct this fault and make the river navigable every year from St. Louis to the Twin Cities that the improvement work was inaugurated and maintained. To date something like $33,000,000 has been spent, and while the army engineers make a claim of substantial results, there is yet much work to be done before the project is complete.

The present project was started in 1907 and at the close of the last fiscal year it was estimated that $33,000,000 had been expended on it. The work at that time was about 33 per cent complete. The engineering theory of the project is quite simple. The Mississippi is a widening, more or less, intractable stream that spreads itself out over the entire river bed. This is done at the expense of the main channel through which the boats must travel. To curb this wastefulness on the part of the Mississippi, the government engineers are building this system of dams on both sides throughout its course. They serve to discourage the river from spreading its waters over the wide valley and by contracting the stream within narrower limits the dams help in washing out the main channel and making it deeper. The engineers aim to provide a channel ranging from 300 feet wide at the upper end to 1,400 feet at the mouth of the Missouri.

River Solidifies the Sands.
Dams are made of brush and stones, the brush to divert the water and the rocks to hold the brush in place. The longer the dams stand the firmer and more impenetrable they become. First the river spreads out between two of the low dams, finds itself obstructed, and recedes, depositing sand between the dams. As this process keeps up eventually a new river bank is built up, vegetation appears and nothing short of a flood will drive the river up over the new bank. At some points along the river the engineers find it advisable to riprap the banks with brush and stone to prevent them washing out and at other points, where the stream has wandered off into a slough, closing dams have been constructed, blocking the river from such forays. Result of this work tends to throw the main body of water into a narrower, deeper channel with the ultimate aim of providing a navigable waterway throughout the season to the head of navigation, the Twin Cities.

This goal is in sight. For the first time in years a barge carrying a cargo of freight from St. Louis and other lower river points reached the Twin Cities this spring. There are three or four other barges in this fleet, and the company operating them hopes to maintain a regular schedule throughout the season. How well they will succeed is a question. All the rivers and streams in this section are low this year and will be yet lower before the summer is over, when the spring freshets and rains have spent their power. Then will come the real test of the river.

Last year a passenger boat from St. Louis tried to reach the Twin Cities. It made fairly good progress until it reached Winona, the first real "port of call" in Minnesota. Then it began to encounter difficulties and finally had to abandon the trip entirely at Hastings, Minn., some 20 miles below St. Paul. With due allowance for the extremely low stage of water last year the army engineers in charge of the river work nevertheless maintain that a boat properly built and handled can navigate to St. Paul today at low water stage.

The new barges going in service this year are designed especially for the upper Mississippi river. They are built to operate in less than a six-foot water stage. But before there can be a genuine revival of river traffic, say the engineers, there must be more adequate terminal and transfer facilities at the cities and towns along the river. A start has been made in that direction, but that is about all. At Alton, Ill., a transfer unit has been installed with railroad connections, and an expeditionary method of moving freight to a from cars or wagons and boats has been provided. This transfer is owned by a railway company. A commencement has been made by construction of sea walls and in some cases installation of railway tracks at St. Paul, Minneapolis, Davenport and Muscatine. All of these proposed terminals are municipally owned and will be available for public use.

Food Plans to Use River.
A recent factor in the revival of this river traffic is Henry Ford. He is now constructing a $10,000,000 manufacturing and distributing plant at St. Paul. It stands on the banks of the Mississippi and his engineers have indicated that they propose to utilize the river to the fullest practicable extent in transporting materials and products to and from the St. Paul plant.

After the enforced winter layoff, government crews have resumed their work of "straitjacketing" the upper Mississippi. Crews with dredges are working out of St. Paul and Rock Island. There is a stretch of about 600 miles between the head of navigation at St. Louis, and the progress of the work depends largely on the appropriations made each year by congress. It is expected that all funds now available will be exhausted by June 30, 1934, and an appropriation of $1,500,000 is now being sought to carry on work for the next fiscal year. It is estimated that the amount of money needed to complete the project is $11,703,000.

This work applies only to the upper Mississippi, that is, between the Twin Cities and St. Louis. From St. Louis on down another greater project is under way. When both are completed, which will not be for some years to come, there will be a commercial waterway approximately 1,000 miles in length. The upper portion of this waterway is navigable about eight months of the year. And some river enthusiasts hope to see the time when Lake Superior will be connected by water with the Gulf of Mexico, 2,000 miles to the south.—New York Times.

Save California Forests of Redwood to Posterity

San Francisco.—Redwood trees with a value of approximately $1,000,000 have been saved for all time in central and northern California through the efforts of the Save-the-Redwoods League.

The league was organized less than four years ago. Individuals and lumber companies have donated lands valued at $500,000 to the movement. The state, Humboldt county and citizens have contributed $475,000 in money to the movement for purchasing other lands.

"And yet the movement has just begun," said Dr. W. F. Bode, an official of the organization. "While 14 miles along the Redwood highway have been preserved, there are several hundred miles, many of them heavily timbered, which should be preserved. We look forward to the establishment of a national redwood park of at least 20,000 acres."

Town in Massachusetts Has 2,500 Bachelors
Clinton, Mass.—There are 2,500 bachelors in this town, according to statistics given out by Town Clerk Carr. Some are tall and others small, fat and thin, blond and brunette, many with beautiful hair, and those seen very seldom at the barber shop—bald, or toupee wearers.

Clinton is often called the "Girls' Paradise." Competition here is very keen for each girl's hand. If any Clinton girl remains an unmarried jewel it's her own fault. Carr has other statistics relative to Clinton's population. The town has 5,900 married men, he said, and consequently 3,000 married women. The families average two children.

To Use Radio to Teach Africans How to Farm

Washington.—Natives in the heart of Africa will be able soon to perform their ancient ceremonial dances to the strain of a radio through a radio loud-speaker, and will be given instructions in modern agricultural methods in the same way under plans of British officials of Kenya colony. Trade Commissioner R. A. May at Alexandria, Egypt, has advised the Commerce department that plans already have been made to install a radio set with loud-speakers in every village. Radio daily instruction programs, he said, farming instructions will be sent to the natives in their own language.

The commission has already had one meeting here, which revealed that every member of the commission is in favor of the project in a broad way.

committee on interstate and foreign commerce in 1912. A resolution authorizing a preliminary inquiry was passed in March, 1915. The preliminary commission reported favorably on the feasibility and recommended a more detailed survey. In 1917 congress authorized the survey by the United States army engineers, who made a favorable report in June, 1920. Further interest was suspended pending the construction of the Panama canal, and was again brought under discussion in 1920, at the time of the treaty providing for the appointment of the international joint commission. Take it Up With Canada.

Consideration of the proposition was again suspended pending the World war. In 1919 congress expressed a desire that the international joint commission investigate the problem and prepare an estimate of the cost of construction. This was done in 1920. The report of the commission was published in 1922. On May 17, 1922, the American government again addressed itself to the Canadian government with suggestions for further action, a reply to which was received on January 30, 1924. The response of the American government, from which the present presidential commission springs, was transmitted on February 27, and the reply of the Canadian government has been issued. National attention to the development of this route has become greatly advanced by the legislation of the 18 states, creating a council known as the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence River waterway association, including Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Colorado, Wyoming, Montana, Idaho, Utah and Oregon, with the governors of the states as members of the council. The opening of the St. Lawrence route would affect transportation involving nearly 42,000,000 of our population, and the large amount of electrical power is of vast importance to the contiguous states. The report of the international joint commission to congress in 1922 stated:

Burden on the Shipper.
"Existing means of transportation are altogether inadequate. A permanent problem is furnished by the congestion at critical points and the pressure of 'peak' loads. Lake movement of commerce stops at Buffalo and has to go forward by rail, a transfer which places an expense burden on the shipper which, in the case of the farmer, often impairs or completely wipes out his profits. Development of the St. Lawrence route, it is predicted, would permit unbroken movement from Lake ports to Atlantic coast ports, or to principal world ports of destination." The conclusions reached by the international joint commission were that physical conditions were favorable for improvements for navigation which would be permanent and with low maintenance costs, that the total cost of improvement from Montreal to Lake Ontario is estimated at $22,728,200, including the cost of developing 1,414,000 hydro electric horsepower, that improvements are carried on simultaneously it would be possible to complete them from the time the work is begun, and that the total annual cost of operation, maintenance and depreciation of these works, including power plants, would be $2,362,000. In his message to congress in December of last year President Coolidge said:

"The time has come to resume in a moderate way the opening of our international waterways, the control of flood waters... the development of the great power and navigation project of the St. Lawrence river... These projects cannot all be undertaken at once, but should have the immediate consideration of the congress and be adopted as fast as plans can be matured and the necessary funds become available."

"This is not incompatible with economy, for their future does not require so much a public expenditure as a capital investment which will be productive, as evidenced by the marked increase in revenue from the Panama canal. Upon these projects depend much future industrial and agricultural progress. They represent the addition of a great amount of cheap power and cheap freight by use of navigable water, which is the bringing of ocean-going ships to the Great Lakes."

The Highgrader

By

It was impossible to work as steadily as he had done during the two previous nights. Hunger and pain and toll were doing their best to wear out his strength. His limbs moved languidly. Once he fell asleep in the midst of his labor. He dreamed of Moya, and after he awakened—as he presently did with a start—he seemed so near that it would scarce have surprised him if in the darkness his hands had come in contact with the soft flesh of her vivid face. Nor did it strike him as at all odd that it was Moya and not Joyce who was visiting him when he was in prison. The face he saw was the mocking one of the young woman, in which gaiety overrode the tender sadness of the big, lanky eyes beneath which tiny freckles had been sprinkled. More than once he clearly heard her whisper courage to him.

Next day the notes in his diary were more fragmentary.

"Broke my rule and smoked two cigars today. Just finished my fourth. Lenses one more. I drink a great deal. It helps me to forget I'm hungry. Find a cigar goes farther if I smoke it in sections. I chew the stubs while I'm working."

"Have tunneled in about seventeen feet. No sign that I'm near the end of the cave-in. There's a lot of hell in being buried alive."

"Think I'm losing my voice from shouting so much when I'm in the shaft. Gave it up today and let Moya call for me. She's a trump. Wish she'd stay here all the time and not keep coming and going."

The feelings on the fourth day show the increase of the delirium. Sometimes his mind appears to be quite clear, then it wanders to queer fancies. Last clear gone first sick from the stuff. Violent retchings. Kept falling asleep while working. Twenty-nine feet done—surely reach the end tomorrow. . . . Another five-in just after I crawled out from my tunnel. All my work wiped out. Moya, the little devil, laughed and said a second a highgrader's right."

"Have telegraphed for help. Can't manage alone. Couldn't make it up the shaft and had to give up the club. Ordered a big breakfast at the Silver Dollar—steak and mushrooms and hot cakes. The telegraph wires run through pipe along floor of tunnel. Why don't the engineer say on his job? I tap my signals and get no answer."

He began to talk to himself in a rambling sort of way. Sometimes he would try to justify himself for huddling in jerky half-coherent phrases, sometimes he argued with himself that he had better let him out. But even

But Even In His Delirious Condition He Stuck to His Work in the Tunnel.

In his delirious condition he stuck to his work in the tunnel, though he was scarce able to drag himself about.

As the sickness grew on him, the light-headed intervals became more frequent. In one of these it occurred to him that he had struck high-grade ore and he filled his pockets with samples taken from the cave-in. There was no sequence to his thoughts. They came in flashes without logical connection. It became, for instance, a firm obsession that the pipe running through the tunnel was a telegraph wire by means of which he could communicate with the outside world if the operator would only stay on duty. But his interest in the matter was intermittent.

It is suggestive of his condition that when Moya's answer came to his seven taps he took it quite as a matter of course.

"The von of a Granger is back on the job at last," he said aloud without the least excitement. "Now, I'll get my breakfast I ordered."

He crawled back to the foot of the shaft in a childish, absurd confidence that the food he craved would soon be sent down to him. While he waited, Jack fell into light sleep where he lost himself in fancies that voiced themselves in incoherent snatches of talk.

CHAPTER XVI

Captain Kilmeny Retires
A voice calling his name from the top of the shaft brought Jack Kilmeny back to consciousness. He answered. A shout of joy boomed down to him in Colter's heavy bass. He could hear, too, the sweet troubled tones of a woman.

"Hurry, please, hurry. . . . Thank God, we're in time."

"Got that breakfast with you, little neighbor," Jack called up weakly. He did not need to be told that Moya Dwight was above, and, since she was there, of course she had brought him the breakfast that he had ordered from the Silver Dollar.

"Get back into the tunnel, Jack," Colter presently shouted.

"What for?"

"We're lowering someone to you. The timberings are rotten and they might fall on you. Get back."

"All right."

Five minutes later the rescuer reached the foot of the shaft. He stood for a moment with a miner's lamp above his head and peered into the gloom.

"Where away, Jack?"

The man was Ned Kilmeny. The captain had insisted—all the more because there was some danger in it—that he should be the man lowered to the aid of his cousin.

"Bring that breakfast?" Jack snapped, testily.

"Yes, old man. It's waiting up above. Brought some soup down with me."

"I ordered two hours ago. What's been keeping you? I'm going to complain of the service."

The captain saw at once that Jack was light-headed and he humored him.

"Yes, I would. Now drink this soup."

The imprisoned man drained the bucket to the last drop.

Ned loosened the rope from his own body and fastened it about that of the rousin. He gave the signal and Jack was hauled very carefully to the surface in such a way as not to collide with the jammed timbers near the top. Colter and Bleyer lifted the highgrader over the edge of the well, where he collapsed at once into the arms of his friends.

"Yes, I would. Now drink this soup."

The imprisoned man drained the bucket to the last drop.

Ned loosened the rope from his own body and fastened it about that of the rousin. He gave the signal and Jack was hauled very carefully to the surface in such a way as not to collide with the jammed timbers near the top. Colter and Bleyer lifted the highgrader over the edge of the well, where he collapsed at once into the arms of his friends.

Moya, a flask in her hand, stooped over the sick man where he lay on the ground. Her face was full of poignant sympathy.

Kilmeny's mind was quite clear now. "The man was grumpy as a fiddle," he said, "but when I saw his face were the lines that showed how close he had shaved death. But in his eye was the gay, inextinguishable gleam of the thoroughbred."

"Ain't I the guttier, Mike Dwight? Keeling over just like a sick baby."

The young woman choked over her answer. "You mustn't talk yet. Drink this, please."

He drank, and later he ate sparingly of the food she had hastily gathered from the dinner table and brought with her. In jerky little sentences he sketched his adventure, mingling fiction with fact as the fever grew on him again.

Bleyer himself a game man could not withhold his admiration after he had heard Captain Kilmeny's story of what he had found below. The two, with Moya were riding behind the wagon in which the rescued man lay.

"Think of the luck of the fellow—boring away at that cave-in when my minute a million tons of rock and dirt might tumble down and crush the life out of him. That's a big enough thing. But add to it his same leg and his wound and starvation on top of that. I'll give it to him for the gamiest fellow that ever went down into a mine."

"That's not all," the captain added quietly. "He must have tunneled in about twenty-five feet when the roof caved again. Clean bowled out as he was. Jack tackled the job a second time."

Moya could not think of what had taken place without a film coming over her eyes and a sob choking her throat. A vagabond and worse he might be, but Jack Kilmeny held her love beyond recall. It was useless to remind herself that he was unworthy. None the less, she gloried in the splendid courage of the man. Whatever else he might be, Jack Kilmeny was every inch a man.

There was a little discussion between Colter and Captain Kilmeny as to which of them should take care of the invalid. The captain urged that he would get better care at the hotel, where Lady Farquhar and India could look after him. Colter referred the matter to Jack.

"I'm not going to burden Lady Farquhar or India. Colter can look out for me," the sick man said.

"It's no trouble. India won't be satisfied unless you come to the hotel," Moya said in a low voice.

He looked at her, was about to decline, and changed his mind. The appeal in her eyes was too potent.

"I'm in the hands of my friends. Settle it any way you like, Miss Dwight. Do whatever you want with me, except put me back in that hell."

After a doctor had seen Jack and taken care of his ankle, after the trained nurse had arrived and been put in charge of the sick room, Captain Kilmeny made a report to Moya and his sister.

"He's gone to sleep already. The doctor says he'll probably be as well as ever in a week, thanks to you, Moya."

"Thanks to you, Ned," she amended. "He sent to you this record of how he spent his time down there—said it might amuse you."

The captain looked straight at her as he spoke.

"I'll read it."

"Do. You'll find something on the last page that will interest you. Now, I'm going to say good-night. It's time little girls were in bed."

He kissed his sister and Moya, rather to the surprise of the latter, for Captain Kilmeny never insisted upon the rights of a lover. There was something on his face she did not quite understand. It was as if he were saying good-by instead of good-night.

She understood it presently. Ned had written a note and pinned it to the last page of the little book. She read it twice, and then again in tears as much as I do tonight. But caring isn't enough. I've had my chance and couldn't win out. May you have good hunting wherever you go."

The note was signed "Ned."

Her betrothed had played the game like the gentleman he was to a loving finish. She knew he would not whisper or complain, that he would meet her tomorrow cheerfully and easily, hiding even from her the wound in his heart. He was a better man than his cousin. She could not deny to herself that his gallantry had a finer edge. His sense of right was better developed and his courage quite as steady. Ned Kilmeny had won his Y. C. before he was twenty-five. He had carried to a successful issue one of the most delicate diplomatic missions of recent years. Everybody conceded that he had a future. If Jack had never appeared on her horizon she would have married Ned and been to him a loving wife. But his ruinous cousin had made this impossible.

Why? Why had her roving heart gone out to this attractive scamp who did not want her love or care for it? She did not know. The thing was an unexplainable mystery. It was inexplicable. All the training of her life had shaped her to other ends. Lady Farquhar would explain it as a glamour cast by a foolish girl's fancy. But Moya knew the tide of feeling which raced through her was born not of fancy but of the true romance.

CHAPTER XVII

Two in a Bucket

Jack heard the story of his rescue from India. He surprised her alone in the breakfast room by her hour in one morning after the rest had gone.

She popped a question directly at him. "Did the doctor say you could get up?"

"Didn't ask him," he answered with a laugh, and dropped into a seat across the table.

Shaved and dressed in a clean freshly pressed suit, he looked a different man from the haggard grimy vagabond Captain Kilmeny had brought back with him three days earlier. The eyes were still rather sunken and the face a bit drawn, but otherwise he was his old self, competent and dominant.

"Good morning, India," was as cheery and matter of fact as if those five days of horror had never existed.

"Don't believe it will hurt you." Her bright eyes were warm in their approval of him. "You look a lot better than you did even yesterday. It's awfully jolly to see you around again, Cousin Jack."

"I'm enjoying it myself," he conceded. "Anything of importance in that covered dish over there?"

"Told me all about it," she ordered, handing him the bacon. Then with a chuckle she added: "Must have been rather awful down there."

"Dad enough," he admitted lightly. "Told me." She leaned forward chin in hand.

"What's the use? Those fellows put me down. Your brother took me up. That's all."

"It isn't all. Ned says it is perfectly marvelous the way you dug that tunnel and escaped from being crushed, and then dug it again after it had caved."

"Couldn't lie down and quit, could I? A man in the hole I was can't pick and choose." He smiled lazily at her and took a muffin from a plate handed him by the waiter. "My turn to ask questions. I want the full story of how you guessed I was in the west shaft of the Golden Nugget."

"Haven't you heard? It was Moya guessed it—from the tapping on the pipe, you know."

"So I've been told. Now let's have the particulars." His eyes went straight into hers and rested there.

India told him. She knew that Ned would make a safe husband for Moya, then this forcible adventurer. It was quite likely to be on the cards that he cared nothing for her friend. Indeed, his desperate flirtation with Joyce indicated as much. Moreover Moya would not marry a man whom she could not respect, one who made his living by dishonest practices. But in spite of all these objections Miss Kilmeny told her cousin how Moya had fought for his life against ridicule and unbelief, regardless of what any of them might think of her.

He made no comment when she had finished. "So I have to thank Moya Dwight for my life."

"Moya alone. They laughed at her, but she wouldn't give up. I never saw anybody so stubborn. There's something splendid in her. She didn't care what any of us thought. The one thing

CROSS CROSSINGS CAUTIOUSLY DRIVE AGAIN UNDER WAY

The annual cross crossings campaign of the railroads is again under way.

Last summer from June to September the railroads of the United States participated in a careful crossing campaign. The object of this campaign was to bring to the attention of the American public through publicity of various kinds the necessity for exercising the greatest possible care to avoid being struck and killed or injured by trains while traveling over highway crossings. The slogan was "Cross Crossings Cautiously" and there is no doubt the warnings given saved many lives.

There were nevertheless 271 crossing accidents resulting in 120 fatalities and 150 injuries on the Pennsylvania Railroad System alone during the four months of the campaign. Nine-tenths of these accidents involving automobiles. A check of more than 100,000 cars at railroad crossings developed that the vast majority of drivers approximately 97 per cent are reasonably careful and that the large number of deaths and injuries in automobile accidents on streets and highways in particularly at road crossings are attributable to gross carelessness—in many instances criminal carelessness—on the part of the other three per cent. The nature of this carelessness is shown by an analysis of the crossing accidents during the Campaign. Campaign which should be of interest to those who own drive or ride in automobiles.

Approximately one half of the accidents involved passenger trains and the other half freight trains and shifting engines. Sixty per cent of the trains in these accidents were running less than 20 miles per hour indicating that the failure of motorists to keep a constant lookout ahead and their cases under control is a great factor in crossing accidents. The speed of the trains. Tests have established that an automobile equipped with effective brakes running 20 miles per hour can be stopped within 25 feet. A train cannot be stopped in a few feet—an automobile can.
